

History of Ideas – Possible Topics for Presentation

This is a workshop that offers no lack of topics for presentation. Any major intellectual development of the past 221 years is fair game. This includes thinkers and ideas from a diverse range of pursuits, including the sciences, medicine and mathematics, philosophy, psychology, political and social theory, art, literature, music, architecture, theatre and more.

Anyone searching for a comprehensive list of topics for the workshop can find one in the table of contents for The Modern Mind and the relevant table of contents for Ideas: A History of Thought and Invention, both of which are posted in the Notes section for this workshop on the Academy website.

This workshop offers an opportunity to approach great ideas from a variety of perspectives. You might choose to present on a thinker (eg. Einstein), a topic (eg. relativity theory) or a theme (eg. experiments to test the general theory of relativity or Einstein's miraculous year – 1905.)

With such an amazing array of choices, one could feel a bit overwhelmed in choosing a topic for presentation, or determining how best to approach it. If so, Martin and David will be more than pleased to assist.
